In 1849, after the final victory of the British over the Sikhs, the celebrated Koh-i-Noor came into the possession of the East India Company, among the Sikh Crown jewels, as war booty. It was presented to Queen Victoria on July 3 1850. Exhibited in a strong case of gilt iron and valued at 2 million pounds sterling, it formed the central attraction of the Great Exhibition of 1851.

Originally the Koh-i-Noor weighed 191 carats but lacked fire. In 1852 it was recut, at Garrards of London, to enhance its lustre but with indifferent results. The jewel was incorporated in the crown used by Queen Elizabeth, Consort to George VI, in 1937.

Some years ago the Government of India applied, without success, for the return of the Koh-i-Noor to India

INTRODUCTION

The very significant contribution of the Asian community to the economic health of Loughborough and area has been largely ignored over the years. This directory is the first attempt to put the Asian businesses on the economic map and to recognise the prolonged efforts of the Asians to establish themselves in local commerce and industry, often against very heavy odds.

The Asian enterprise began, in this area, in 1968 and proceeded at a very slow pace till 1979. It was not till after 1980 that the pace quickened to an average increase of ten new businesses annually. Today there are 49 Asian businesses established in the Loughborough Town centre and a further 25 firms exist outside the city centre. Hathern, Shepshed, Quorn, Mountsorrel and Sileby account for a further 21 firms making a total of 95 firms (as at August 30th 1986).

To what do the Asians owe their economic success? It may be attributed to their ability to work long hours of hard work, the general excellence of their family life and their ability to save money and receive economic aid from related families.

Each entry in this directory shows the nature of the business, the date it was established, address and the name of the proprietor together with his telephone number.

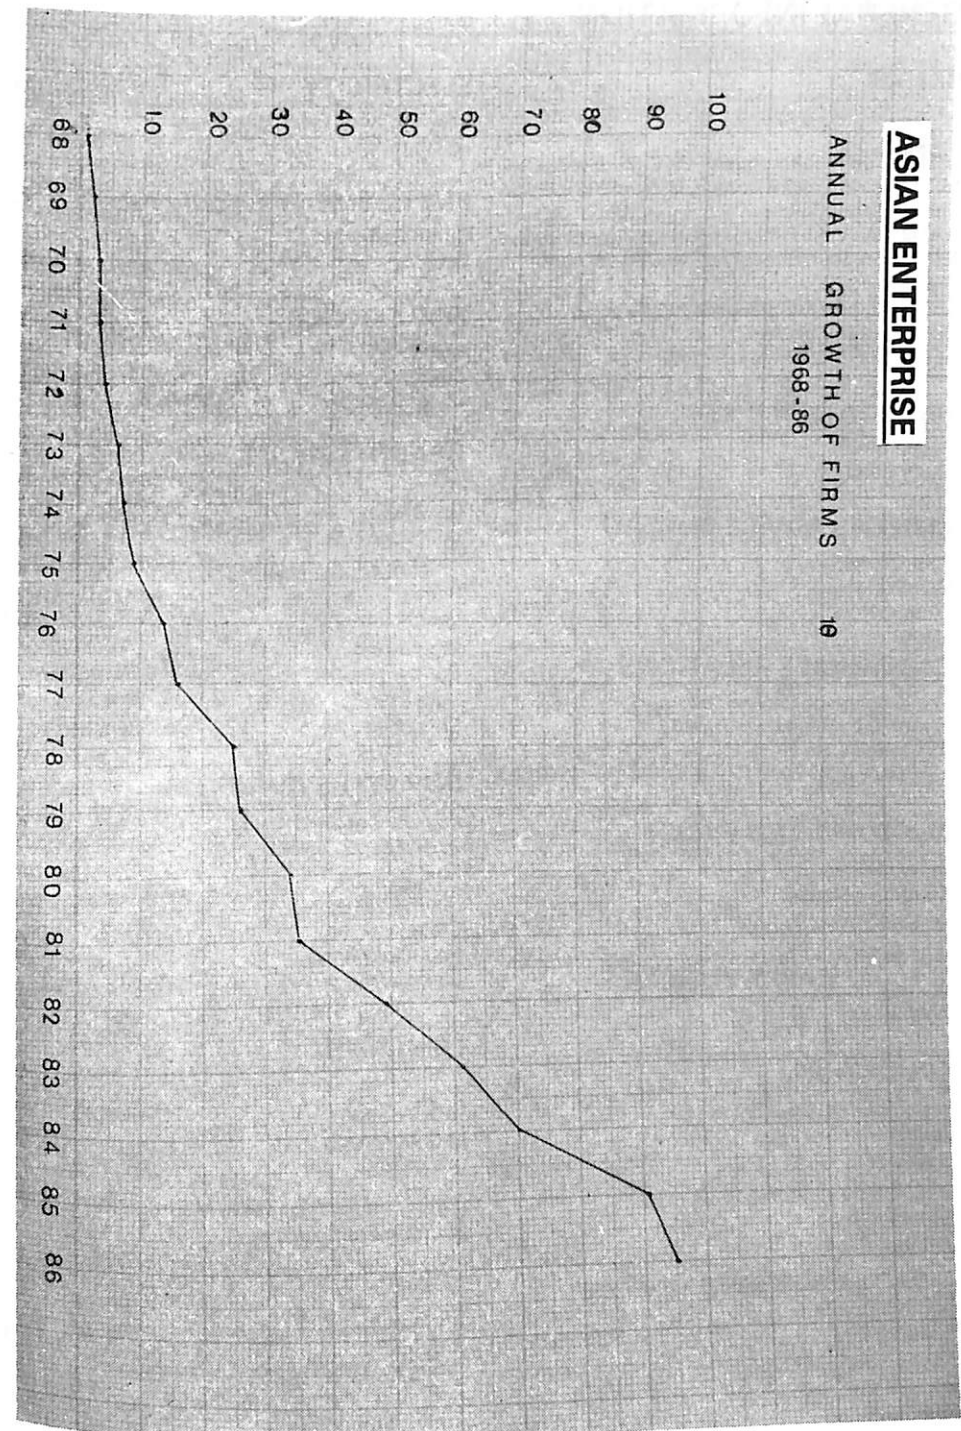

Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of all entries and advertisements. However the publishers, their agents or servants accept no responsibility for any omission or incorrect insertion as to wording, space or position of any such entry or advertisement.

The maps of Loughborough and area are reproduced with the kind permission of NJC Publicity Services, Leicester. An attempt has been made to pin point and locate each business on the appropriate map.

The material contained herein is subject to copyright and it must not be reproduced in any shape or any means without the written permission of the publishers.

No account has been taken of any developments in Asian enterprise after 30th August 1986.
